Your question

Should I take the job offer in Portland, or stay where I am?

Past: The Eight of Cups. You've already started walking away from something, even if your body hasn't caught up yet. This card shows a person leaving a table of full cups at night. Nothing was wrong with what they had. It just stopped being theirs.

Present: The Two of Swords. Blindfolded, holding two blades crossed over the heart. You're trying to decide by not looking. The cards suggest the stillness is costing you more than either choice would.

Future: The Fool. A step off the edge with a small bag and a dog at your heels. This isn't a promise that Portland goes smoothly. It's a sign that the leaving itself matters more than where you land.
